
Unit 1 - Review #6

PREPOSITIONS and Articulated Prepositions

We are moving forward and going to tackle what might arguably be one of the most challenging topic for students of Italian to master... PREPOSITIONS and ARTICULATED PREPOSITIONS!

Even when you become fluent in Italian, you can still be confused by prepositions and how to use them correctly every time. In this review, we will summarize the key points of prepositions and articulated prepositions so that you have a guide to look back on when you need a reminder!

(If you are a student who learns best through song or rhymes, please rewatch the start of this review video to hear the melody of a little song Italians sing when learning prepositions. It may be a good memory tool for you!)

Although prepositions and articulated prepositions are a concept that will surely confuse you a bit, luckily for us, they behave in a relatively predictable way. So, once you grasp prepositions and articulated prepositions, you will be able to follow some guidelines, more or less, to help you use them correctly!

Tell me everything you know about Prepositions! When do you use each one? How much can you remember?

The main PREPOSITIONS

DI	OF
A	TO / AT
DA	FROM
IN	IN
CON	WITH
SU	ON / OVER
PER	FOR
TRA / FRA (these two are interchangeable)	BETWEEN / AMONG / AMONGST

We are going to first begin with the prepositions CON, SU, PER.

Tell me everything you know about the prepositions: CON, SU, PER.

The Prepositions CON, SU, PER

CON	WITH
SU	ON / OVER
PER	FOR

The preposition CON may be the easiest one to use out of these three. It means WITH and it is used in the same way that you would use it in English.

Examples:

Mi piace studiare con Flavia.

I like to study with Flavia.

Esci con me?

Will you go out with me?

Orecchiette con i carciofi

Orecchiette (type of pasta) with artichokes

The preposition PER is another relatively easy one. It translates in most cases to FOR, and is also used the way it would be used in English.

Examples:

Ecco un regalo per tua figlia.

Here is a present for your daughter.

Ho studiato l'Italiano per tre anni.

I studied Italian for three years.

NOTE

Since we use the Passato Prossimo HO STUDIATO in this sentence, it means that I STUDIED Italian for three years and no longer study it.

If you want to say: I have been studying Italian for three years (and still study it), the sentence is:
Studio l'Italiano da tre anni.

We basically need to state the fact in the Present Tense and use the Proposition DA (from).

Another Example using PER:

Per chi cucini stasera?

For whom are you cooking tonight?

Who are you cooking for tonight?

The preposition SU is very similar to English. It means ON. Like English, the preposition SU is usually followed by an article like, ON THE TABLE.

Examples:

La penna è su tavolo.

The pen is on the table.

In this example, SU combines with the article IL from IL TAVOLO.

SU + IL = SUL

Scrivo un libro sulla lingua Italiana

I am writing a book about/on the Italian language.

In this example, SU combines with the article LA from LA LINGUA.

SU + LA = SULLA

Vado su!

I am going upstairs!

In this example, SU means UPSTAIRS. GIÙ on the other hand, means DOWNSTAIRS.

SU combines with articles

CON / PER only combines with articles in speech (you'll see more of this when we get to the part about Articulated Prepositions).

PER "in order to"

If you wanted to say:

In order to find a job, you must have a good CV

You would use the preposition PER:

Per trovare lavoro, devi avere un buon CV

I know that TROVARE already means TO FIND. But remember, Italian is its own language and the more you try to translate things word for word, the more confused you will become. So in this sentence, you say PER TROVARE because in Italian you need something to suggest that the verb we are using is performed “in order to” achieve another goal/verb.

Vado in Italia per migliorare il mio Italiano I'm going to Italy to improve/better my Italian

This sentence is similar to the one above. MIGLIORARE already means TO IMPROVE. But, we must say PER MIGLIORARE. If it helps you remember the correct usage of PER, say this sentence in English like this instead:

I'm going to Italy (in order to) improve/better my Italian

Or, in a slightly odd English:

I'm going to Italy for improving/bettering my Italian

In Italian, you CAN'T end a sentence in a preposition. In English you might say:

Want to come with?

In Italian, you can't say this because you can't end a sentence with the preposition CON.

You can say:

Vuoi venire con me? Want to come with me?

More examples:

Con chi esci? Who are you going out with?

Perché lo fai? What are you doing this for?

Prepositions TRA / FRA

TRA / FRA	BETWEEN / AMONGST
-----------	-------------------

Tell me everything you know about the prepositions: TRA / FRA.

Anytime you want to say AMONGST or BETWEEN, you can use either TRA or FRA, as they're interchangeable and usually chosen based on personal preference of to avoid the repetition of the sounds TR and FR in nearby words.

Examples:

Abito tra Roma e Firenze

I live between Rome and Florence

È seduto fra i suoi amici

He's sitting amongst/between his friends

Quale preferisci fra tutti questi?

Which do you prefer among/between all of these?

Another point to remember about the prepositions TRA / FRA, is that it is also used when in English we say IN when referring to Time.

Examples:

Ci vediamo fra 10 minuti
 Vado in Italia fra due mesi

See you in 10 minutes
 I am going to Italy in two months

It's a common mistake for student to say:

*Ci vediamo in 10 minuti

Notice it now, and do your best to not make this mistake!

TRA / FRA only combines with prepositions in speech.

The preposition DA

DA	FROM / BY / FOR
----	-----------------

Tell me everything you know about the preposition DA.

The preposition DA is another one that is often combined with a definite article.

Examples:Ho ricevuto un regalo da Carlo*I received a present from Carlo*Vengo dalla spiaggia*I am coming from the beach*Da dove arriva questo pacco?*Where does this parcel come from?*Prendete l'acqua dal frigo*Take the water from the fridge*

The preposition DA becomes a little confusing when it comes to verbs of movement. With verbs of movement, the preposition DA can mean TO.

When we are referring to Time, the preposition DA can mean FOR.

Examples:Stasera andiamo da Rita*Tonight we are going to Rita's*Studio Italiano da quattro anni*I've been studying Italian for four years*Ti aspettiamo da due ore!We've been waiting for you for two hours!

I know, this is a challenging concept in Italian! Don't worry so much about it. Practice will help you get better at it. I know people who are fluent and really good at Italian who still get prepositions confused when they speak. You just have to do your best! I know English very well but still make mistakes sometimes. This is all apart of learning a new language!

The preposition A

A	TO / AT
----------	----------------

Before we review more about the preposition A:

What can you remember about the preposition A?

Right from the start the preposition A has two meanings: TO or AT.

Some examples:

Sono a scuola	I'm at school
Studiate all' università	You guys study at the university
A che ora parti?	(At) what time are you leaving?
Porto la cena a mia sorella	I am bringing dinner to my sister

The examples above are quite similar to when you would use TO or AT in English. However, the preposition A is the preposition we use before cities:

Example:

Abitiamo a Roma	We live in Rome
------------------------	-------------------------------

In English you would say:

We live in Rome

But, in Italian, instead of using IN we use the preposition A.

Don't forget that the preposition A combines with definite articles. You can see in the sentence above:

Studiate all'università

A + LA (for l'università) = ALL'università.

The preposition A is also used to introduce direction of movement. It can also be used between two verbs. As you can see, the preposition A is used in many different ways!

Examples of A used to introduce direction of movement:

Stasera andate a cinema?	Are you guys going to the cinema/movies tonight?
Non vado a casa, vado a scuola!	I'm not going to school, I'm going (to) home!

Examples of A between two verbs:

Vado a casa a preparare la cena	I'm going (to) home to prepare dinner
Vai in Italia a studiare o a lavorare?	Are you going to Italy to work or to study?

The Preposition DI

DI	OF
----	----

What can you remember about the preposition DI?

The preposition DI means OF. It is used to express material or the “intrinsic” quality of something.

Examples:

Un tavolo di legno

A wooden table / Table made of wood

Un vestito di cotone

A cotton dress / A dress made of cotton

The preposition DI is used also as the English Saxon Genitive would be used. You add the preposition DI where you would add an apostrophe S in English, “S”.

Examples:

La casa di Marco

Marcos house

Il compleanno di Lucia

Lucias birthday

Notice the order: thing owned first + DI + owner

The preposition DI is also used when English would use two nouns where one noun describes another. In English you are basically using one of the two nouns as an adjective, but in Italian we simply cannot have one noun describing another noun. DI (and sometimes DA) fix this problem.

Il libro di ricette

A recipe book / A book of recipes

In English, both RECIPE and BOOK are nouns, but we are using RECIPE as an adjective of BOOK.

Il corso di Italiano mi piace molto

I like the course of Italian a lot / I like the Italian course a lot

La fiesta di compleanno di Lucia

The party of Lucia's birthday / Lucia's birthday party

If you are finding it challenging to understand how to use the preposition DI, refer back to Beginner Italian Level 1 where they were first introduced, or check your grammar good.

The Preposition IN

IN	IN
-----------	-----------

What can you remember about the preposition IN?

The preposition IN, I think, is pretty straight forward. It gets a little tricky when it is used with verbs of movement, but we're going to do our best to understand it as clearly and as straightforward as possible.

The preposition IN usually combines with articles.

Examples:

Metti l'acqua nel frigo	Put the water in the fridge
Ho gli occhiali nello zaino	I have glasses in the backpack (my glasses are in my backpack)

The preposition IN will combine with articles like we see above. UNLESS we are using the preposition IN with verbs of movement, to express movement towards (TO). In this case, IN stays unchanged.

Examples:

Andiamo in banca	We are going to the bank
NOT *andiamo nella banca
Andiamo in palestra	We are going to the gym
Andiamo in farmacia	We are going to the pharmacy

The preposition IN is used in many many different expressions for no particular reason like:

In vacanza	on holiday / vacation
In spiaggia	at the beach
In ufficio	at the office

The preposition IN is also used before Countries and States or Regions.

Examples:

Abito in Italia	I live in Italy
Sono in vacanza	I am on vacation / holiday
Vado in Italia	I am going to Italy
In Italia si parla Italiano	In Italy you speak in Italian

When the Preposition IN is NOT used

The preposition IN is NOT used with expressions of Time

The preposition IN is NOT used before the months of the year

We DO NOT say:

*Ci vediamo in due giorni

We SAY:

Ci vediamo fra / tra due giorni

I will see you/we will see each other in two days

We DO NOT say:

*In settembre mi sposo

We SAY:

A settembre mi sposo

I am getting married in September

The Prepositions A, IN, DA with Verbs of Movement

What can you remember about the prepositions A, IN, DA when they are used with Verbs of Movement?

When we use the prepositions A, IN, DA with verbs of movement, they can be roughly translated to the English TO. Yes this can be considered a lot. Three Italian prepositions for one English preposition. Give it time and practice!

Examples:

Vado a Roma	I am going to Rome
Vado in Italia	I am going to Italy
Vado da Manu	I am going to Manu's

The preposition A is used when we are going to/towards a City. This may be the easiest way to use it.

The preposition A is also used with “symbolic” destinations, or concepts. What I mean by this is that you can tell someone that you are going to the OPERA or THEATER. Yes, you are going to a physical place, but these activities are concepts and art forms. You can tell someone that you go to COLLEGE or UNIVERSITY. When you say this, you usually don't imply that you are physically going to the building where the concept of education persists, but that your occupation is student and that you ATTEND THE UNIVERSITY / COLLEGE.

The preposition A is also used with certain fixed expressions.

Some examples of fixed expressions that use A:

A CASA	HOME
A SCUOLA	TO SCHOOL
A LAVORO	TO WORK
AL SUPERMERCATO	TO THE SUPERMARKET
AL CINEMA	TO THE CINEMA / MOVIES
AL MERCATO	TO THE MARKET
AL MARE	TO THE BEACH

The preposition A usually combines with a Definite Article. But again, not always. You just have to remember the fixed expressions and phrases that don't require it, like, A CASA.

Examples:

Stasera andiamo all'opera

Tonight we're going to the opera

Studio all'università

I study at the University / I go to College

Vado a casa / a lavoro / a scuola

I am going home / to work / to school

Andate al cinema / al supermercato

You guys are going to the cinema(movies) / to the supermarket

We use the preposition IN when we speak of going to a general destination, movement INTO a building, Country, States, Regions.

Examples:

Vado in banca/in posta/in chiesa

I am going to the bank/post office/to church

Andiamo in America

We're going to America

Andiamo negli Stati Uniti

We're going to the United States

In this last example we see IN combined with GLI. I told you that IN doesn't usually combine with articles when it refers to movement towards something. Why do you think that in this specific sentence, IN is combined with an article?

Because GLI is a part of STATI UNITI. The correct way to say THE UNITED STATES is, GLI STATI UNITI.

More examples:

Venite in Calabria?

Are you guys coming to Calabria?

Vengo in California

I am coming to California

Don't overthink this! Some expressions you're just better off memorizing. If you try to make sense of every little detail of the Italian language, it will get unbearably confusing! Trust yourself and trust the process!

Now here's a piece of information that will either confuse you, or get you excited. I know that I told you that when it come to verbs of movement, we use the preposition IN. This is true when we are saying that we're going to the BANK, LIBRARY and so forth.

But, if we are talking about a specific place, like a specific COMMONWEALTH BANK or NATIONAL MUSEUM, we use the preposition A. Look here:

Andiamo alla banca dove lavora Sara We're going to the bank where Sara works

This example is very specific because we aren't going into just any bank, we're going to a bank where our friend SARA works.

Andiamo alla Biblioteca Nazionale We're going to the National Library

In this example we aren't going into just any library, we're going into the NATIONAL LIBRARY of the place we're in/visiting.

When we are talking about a general destination, we use the preposition IN.

Whenever we specify the destination, we switch back to the preposition A, combined with the correct Definite Article.

The preposition DA means FROM. But when it is used with verbs of movement, the preposition DA can mean TO. This happens when we move towards a person.

Examples:

Vado dal panettiere	I am going to the bread baker
Devi andare dal dottore?	Do you have to go to the doctor?
Passo dal farmacista	I am going to pass/walk by the pharmacist
Andiamo da Luca e Stefano?	Are we going to Luca and Stefano's?

This preposition with verbs of movement may be the easiest to remember because it's consistent!

Articulated Prepositions / Combined Prepositions

What can say about Articulated / Combined Prepositions?

Some prepositions merge with the definite article that follows.

In English you would say:

To the children

In this example, TO is the preposition and THE is the definite article. In Italian, TO is A, and THE CHILDREN is, I BAMBINI.

So, Preposition + Definite Article = Articulated Preposition

A + I = AI bambini

These prepositions combine with the Definite Articles ALL the time:

DI, A, DA, IN, SU

This preposition combines with Definite Articles only in speech:

CON

These prepositions sometimes combine, only in speech:

PER, TRA, FRA

You would see these prepositions merges in poetic writing. In speech you may sometimes hear it but not often. I don't recommend you try this right now because it's not necessary or common.

Why do we merge prepositions with the article? Because it's faster! Simple! When you combine a preposition with the article, you basically combine two words to make one, and it actually rolls off your tongue smoother when you speak!

Examples:

Prendo l'acqua dal frigo e la metto sul tavolo

I take the water from the fridge and put it on the table

Lavori dalle 8 alle 16

You work from (the)8 till (the)16/4:00

È aperto dal lunedì al sabato

It's open from (the)Monday to (the)Saturday

Dalla finestra si vedono le montagne

From the window you can see the Mountains

Col tempo, tutto passa

With (the)time, everything passes (time heals everything)

È entrata Marta colle scarpe bagnate

Marta entered with her wet shoes

Usciamo cogli amici

We're going out with our friends

Here is an example of PER + IL:

Pei compleanno di Rita faccio la torta

For Rita's birthday I'm making a cake/I'm making a cake for Rita's birthday

Like I said, this way is kind of poetic and I don't recommend you do it. I do it sometimes when I'm speaking very very fast and just combining words. You will hear a lot of these combinations from people who are speaking very quickly.

How do these combinations work?

The Definite Articles:

IL	L'	LO	I	GLI
LA	L'			LE

The Merging Prepositions:

DI	A	DA	IN	SU	(CON)
-----------	----------	-----------	-----------	-----------	--------------

Combinations for the preposition A:

A + IL	AL
A + L	ALL'
A + LA	ALLA
A + LO	ALLO
A + I	AI
A + GLI	AGLI
A + LE	ALLE

Examples:

Porto la pizza alle ragazze

All'aeroporto non c'è mai parcheggio

Agli italiani piace mangiare

I'm bringing pizza to the girls

There's never any parking at the airport

Italians like to eat/eating is pleasing to

Italians

Combinations for the preposition DI:

DI + IL	DEL
DI + L	DELL'
DI + LA	DELLA
DI + LO	DELLO
DI + I	DEI
DI + GLI	DEGLI
DI + LE	DELLE

Combinations for the preposition DA:

DA + IL	DAL
DA + L	DALL'
DA + LA	DALLA
DA + LO	DALLO
DA + I	DAI
DA + GLI	DAGLI
DA + LE	DALLE

Combinations for the preposition IN:

IN + IL	NEL
IN + L	NELL'
IN + LA	NELLA
IN + LO	NELLO
IN + I	NEI
IN + GLI	NEGLI
IN + LE	NELLE

Combinations for the preposition SU:

SU + IL	SUL
SU + L	SULL'
SU + LA	SULLA
SU + LO	SULLO
SU + I	SUI
SU + GLI	SUGLI
SU + LE	SULLE

Combinations for the preposition CON:

CON + IL	COL
CON + L	COLL'
CON + LA	COLLA
CON + LO	COLLO
CON + I	COI
CON + GLI	COGLI
CON + LE	COLLE

Examples:

Compro vestiti dagli amici di Sandra

Portano lo zaino sulle spalle

Mangiamo dai genitori di Rita

Scrivo un libro sull'importanza
dell'alimentazione

Il problema dello smog è che...

I buy clothes from Sandra's friends

They carry the backpack on the shoulders

We're eating at Rita's parents

I am writing a book on the importance of nutrition

The problem of the smog is...

The great thing about these combinations is that you just have to memorize the combination for each preposition with the article IL. Then, it will be easy to replicate it using the rest of them!

DEL	AL	DAL	NEL	SUL	(COL)
-----	----	-----	-----	-----	-------

The PARTITIVO

What do you remember about the PARTITIVO?

What is the PARTITIVO? It is when you use the articulated preposition DI to express an unspecified and undefined quantity!

Examples:

Vorrei del pane	I would like some bread
Prendiamo della pizza	We're getting some pizza
Conosco delle persone simpatiche	I know friendly people
Mi porti delle carote?	Will you bring me some carrots?

If you don't have a specific amount/quantity of something, and just want SOME of something, we use the Partitivo.

Don't say:

Vorrei pane*

Say:

Vorrei del pane

It's good to get familiar with the PARTITIVO because Italians use it a lot! It adds to the melody and flow of the Italian language.

If you're not ready to use the PARTITIVO yet, can you think of other expressions that would mean the same thing as saying SOME of something?

Other ways to express unspecified amounts

QUALCHE

ALCUNI / ALCUNE

UN PO' DI

literally means: a little bit

Do you remember these expressions?

Examples:

Compro delle carote	I'm buying some carrots / a few carrots
Compro qualche carota	I'm buying some carrots / a few carrots
Compro alcune carote	I'm buying some carrots / a few carrots
Compro un po' di carote	I'm buying some carrots / a few carrots

All of these sentences mean the same thing in Italian! So is there ANY difference between them?

QUALCHE + SINGULAR ITEM

Qualche amico A few friends

Even though we are basically speaking of friends, when we use QUALCHE we need to use the noun in the singular: AMICO.

ALCUNI/E + PLURAL

Alcune carote Some carrots

Alcuni amici Some friends

When using ALCUNI/E, you have to match the gender and make sure your noun is plural.

UN PO' DI + SINGULAR/PLURAL

Vorrei un po' d'acqua I would like a little bit of water

Vorrei un po' di torta I would like a little bit of cake

This expression literally means A LITTLE BIT OF. Although you can use it in the place of any of the other expressions listed above, be cautious with this one. It's very colloquial. You wouldn't really say:

Un po' di amici A little bit of friends

It's not wrong if you say it this way, but would you? Or would you rather say SOME FRIENDS or A FEW FRIENDS? However, you can absolutely have a LITTLE BIT OF WATER or CAKE.

Which one should you use?

If you asked me which expressions I like the best and which ones I think are the most eloquent to express this content of 'undefined quantity' here is what I'd say!

MY PREFERENCE LIST:

1. PARTITIVO
2. QUALCHE
3. ALCUNI / ALCUNE
4. UN PO' DI

This means, that I would be, in most cases using the Partitivo, occasionally replacing it by QUALCHE. ALCUNI/ALCUNE is very beautiful, but tends to be used more in writing, while with UN PO' DI we run the risk of sounding too casual.

If we wanted to express that "we are eating (some/a few) pastries", we could say:

1. Mangiamo delle paste
2. Mangiamo qualche pasta
3. Mangiamo alcune paste
4. Mangiamo un po' di paste

* Don't be confused with this word... PASTA means PASTA when it's uncountable, but it means PASTRY (as in Danish) when it is countable!
